Teaching Prohibition

GOALS

➢ To provide primary resources and discussion strategies that support the use of the Ken Burns-Lynn Novick film Prohibition in class

http://www.pbs.org/kenburns/prohibition/watch-video/#id=2082675582

➢ Lesson plans:

law and individual liberties
politics of Prohibition roots of Prohibition immigration and Prohibition

http://www.pbs.org/kenburns/prohibition/educators/lesson-plans/

➢ Understanding:

Prohibition was the defining issue of American culture and politics of the 1920s. It brings together most of the key issues of the period and sets the stage for many of the "culture wars" of the 20th (and 21st!) century.
Teaching Prohibition

FROM THE FORUM
Challenges, Issues, Questions

- Prohibition is hot topic among students.
- What were the roots of Prohibition?
- How did Prohibition affect the social, cultural and political arenas?
- How can we teach Prohibition without glamorizing the world of alcohol?
- How (or do we) alter the way we teach this subject in light of school alcohol awareness programs?
- What is the relationship between Prohibition and World War I?
- In what ways are the issues caught up in Prohibition still with us today?
- What does Prohibition tell us about the relationship between the government and the individual?
- How did Prohibition affect working people, the people who could not afford night clubs and speakeasies?
- How does Prohibition relate to the temperance movement of the 19th century?

Introduction

• Prohibition is about much more than alcohol.
• It offers a preview of the "culture wars" of modern America.
• It gives us insight into the ways modern America was changing in the 1920s.
• It highlights the "unintended consequences" of the well-meaning reforms.
• It allows us to consider the limits of reform and our relationship to the law.
They say that the English cannot settle any thing properly, without a dinner. I am sure the Americans can fix nothing, without a drink. If you meet, you drink; if you part, you drink; if you make acquaintance, you drink; if you close a bargain you drink; they quarrel in their drink, and they make it up with a drink. They drink, because it is hot; they drink because it is cold. If successful in elections, they drink and rejoice; if not, they drink and swear; they begin to drink early in the morning, they leave off late at night; they commence it early in life, and they continue it, until they soon drop into the grave. To use their own expression, the way they drink, is "quite a caution." As for water, what the man said, when asked to belong to the Temperance Society, appears to be the general opinion, "it’s very good for navigation."
All the evil the saloon does in breeding poverty and in corrupting politics; all the suffering it brings into the lives of its thousands of innocent victims, the wives and children of drunkards it sends forth to curse the community; its fostering of crime and its shielding of criminals--it is all as nothing to this, its worst offence. …For the corruption of the child there is no restitution. None is possible. It saps the very vitals of society; undermines its strongest defences, and delivers them over to the enemy.

If Food will Win the War, — why waste 1,890,000,000 pounds of it yearly in beer? (Computed from Hoover’s monthly estimate.)

If Money, — why let alcohol deprive us of over $2,500,000,000 yearly? — (Irving Fisk.

If Coal, — why forego the more than 60,000,000 extra tons of coal that coal operators declare we should get by closing the Saloons?

If Transportation, — why allow more than 100,000 cars to be given over to that worse than non-essential-Beer?
The leaders of the so-called prohibition movement know as well as you and I do that you can no more prevent an individual from taking a drink if he be so inclined than your can prevent him from scratching himself if he itches. They object to the existence of the saloon, not, bear in mind, to that of the badly conducted saloon, but to that of the well-regulated, decent saloon, and wherever they succeed in destroying the latter, their object, which is the manifestation of their political power, is attained. That for every decent, well-ordered saloon they destroy, there springs up a dive, or speak-easy, or blind tiger, or whatever other name it may be known by, and the dispensing of drink continues as merrily as before, doesn't disturb them at all.

California hop growers earnestly protest against threatened action of federal government prohibiting brewing of beer as necessary war measure. Hops are perennial like fruit orchards. Expensive trellises, kilns, coolers and years supply materials contracted for would be total loss. Growers absolutely ruined. Cant [sic] change to other crop this year. Thousands old people and children employed in hop yards would suffer. Cant [sic] market crop abroad. England now brewing ten million barrels beer per year for public and eleven and a half million for army and navy. This statement absolutely authentic. Situation here does not demand ruin of hop growers and brewers with loss of millions.

There has never been a time when deliberate disregard of law was habitual among the classes which represent culture, achievement, and wealth— the classes among whom respect for law is usually regarded as constant and instinctive. …It is universally admitted. Friends of Prohibition and enemies of Prohibition, at odds on everything else, are in entire agreement upon this.

The Prohibition law can be enforced and made substantially as effective as any other law in this city. We have never been able so far in this history of this city to prevent violation… of every law on the statute books, but we have been able to bring most lawbreakers to justice…. No reasonable citizen expects that any particular law can be completely enforced and this, of course, is true in respect to the Federal prohibition law.

Our great difficulty… is the fact that this law does not have the moral support of the general public. …[I]n the minds of a very considerable number of our citizens, the law is oppressive and an unreasonable interference with what they claim to be their personal liberties.
The man who buys liquor when he is thirsty for it is not a criminal in the sense that a check forger or a thief is a criminal. No; such a man...is dissatisfied with a particular condition imposed upon him by society, and is making his protest against it by taking the matter into his own hands. As long as he is frank about it, and professes his dissatisfaction in words and votes as well as deeds, I have no particular quarrel with him. But he is a hypocrite of the worst sort if he drinks in secret and shouts in public for the virtues of prohibition.
I believe that the percentage of whisky drinkers in the United States now is greater than in any other country of the world. Prohibition is responsible for that.

At least $1,000,000,000 a year is lost to the National Government and the several States and counties in excise taxes. The liquor traffic is going on just the same. This amount goes into the pockets of bootleggers and in the pockets of the public officials in the shape of graft....

I will concede that the saloon was odious but now we have delicatessen stores, pool rooms, drug stores, millinery shops, private parlors, and 57 other varieties of speak-easies selling liquor and flourishing.

I have heard of $2,000 a year prohibition agents who run their own cars with liveried chauffeurs.
Testimony before the Committee on the Judiciary of the United States Senate (1926).

… in dealing with gigantic social evils like disease or crime, individual liberty must be controlled in the interest of the public welfare.

Limitation upon individual freedom in matters affecting society is the price that any people must pay for the progress of its civilization. Personal liberty can not rightly be claimed for practices which militate against the welfare of others or the interests of the community as a whole.
A bill has been introduced into Congress proposing the payment of $30,000 to the wife and children of Henry Virkula who was killed by a customs patrolman on the highway near his home in Minnesota. …

While riding with his wife and children this man was fired upon and killed by the patrolman who mistakenly thought he was transporting liquor. As to whether or not the officer was justified in shooting is for the courts and not the newspapers to decide. But leaving that matter out of consideration the pitiful fact remains that an innocent man on the public highway was killed, a wife was made a widow and two children orphans. …

In all the generations of our Christian civilization transporting liquor has never been looked upon as an atrocious crime even by sober-minded thinking people who did not use it themselves. But now, without realizing its consequences, we have permitted our lawmakers to make a felony of that which, in its nature, is not a heinous crime.

The tragedy under consideration is not the first one resulting from this mistake. Neither is it liable to be the last one. … The root of the whole trouble is in the law itself - law at which a respectable portion of the people rebel.
“They urge us to respect the Constitution, but which are we to respect—the old Constitution or the prohibition amendment? We cannot respect and obey both as they flatly contradict each other.”

I trust in the good sense of the American people that they will not bring upon themselves the curse of excessive use of intoxicating liquors, to the detriment of health, morals, and social integrity.

The objective we seek through a national policy is the education of every citizen towards a greater temperance throughout the Nation.
